Preparing your future classroom

Technology is offering increasing benefits everywhere. And this will certainly include your classroom. New opportunities are likely to land in Special Education settings first. This has certainly been the case in the past – take touch screens, tablets, text prediction, spell-checking and frameworks for personalised content – all in SEN settings long before they were adopted in mainstream education. Now eye gaze and online content are set to take this much, much, further.

Eye gaze does not just work for learners with severe physical disabilities; it can help those who also have profound learning disabilities. Eye gaze not only enables learners without speech to communicate; it can help us to see the world through their eyes. We can not only track where children look and for how long but even what makes them blink, or their pupils widen!

Online resources like HelpKidzLearn and Chooselt! Maker 3 close the communication loop. As they are used they generate data which can report progress objectively and calculate the most effective track through the learning resources available. Meanwhile the global data generated will establish norms which will give the progress of individual children a context. We are well on the way with the research to make this happen – particularly with the rich data generated with eye gaze.

You can keep pace with developments by subscribing to the growing wealth of fixed content in HelpKidzLearn and the tools to make personalised content which meets the individual interests of a learner with Chooselt! Maker 3.

The full range of eye gaze options is also set out starting on page 24 together with the suites of software that can take pupils through the early stages.

A great deal of guidance is available online too, through our webinars, videos and newsletters not to mention SpecialWorld.net (check out the online relaunch!). All of this is free – including our Information Days where we tour the UK with a full day's demonstration of the latest technology and treat you to lunch! See page 120.

Most of you use iPad or Android tablets with children. We continue to add to the forty Apps which we supply (try my favourites, Auntie Maggie's Recipe and Counting Songs 2!). It is vital for us that all children are included, so the catalogue contains a huge range of mountings, cases, amplifiers, speakers and switch options, many of which you won't have seen before. See pages 10 - 23.

You may not have seen fourteen of our switch-adapted toys before either! Whether it's Little Miss Chatterbox, or a switch operated airplane, bus or tractor there is fresh fun to be had! See pages 61 - 65.

New products abound in our sensory and communication sections. From the squidgy fish in the tactile bag to the binoculars which let you voice-record what you see. See pages 66 - 71.

Finally don't miss the last of the Toby Churchill AdVOCAte+s. A most versatile device at a crazy price. When these are gone they are gone! See page 80.

Eye Gaze in the Classroom

Eye gaze technology is perhaps the most exciting, innovative and important piece of assistive technology to hit the special needs classroom in decades.

What is so different about eye gaze?

In one way, eye gaze should be seen as just another potential access method for those with physical disabilities. In practice, we are seeing users of other access devices, particularly switch users, generally finding eye gaze access quicker, easier, less fatiguing (more so with practice) and a lot less restrictive.

This is particularly important for AAC users, where speed and flexibility are important factors in communication. We have seen a huge shift to individuals using eye gaze to access communication software that once used switch access.

With a massive drop in the price of eye gaze technology in recent years, we are beginning to see special schools and services around the globe adopt eye gaze devices to complement their fully inclusive, accessible classrooms and resource kits.

We are starting to see schools use eye gaze more creatively, and use it with a range of their favourite software and websites, not just with specialist eye gaze titles.

However, eye gaze does differ from other access devices - it can be used as an OUTPUT device and used to control, but we can also, with the right software, use it to gain insight into what is INPUT, i.e. the information the student is processing visually.

Eye gaze technology has been used in this way for many years in the research field, but it is only now we are able to use this technology in the classroom to give teachers and therapists objective and functional feedback and analysis on students' looking behaviours.

With the right tools we can start to observe what our students see, attend to and track on screen; what they notice and don't notice, what they prefer to look at and what sense they make of what they see.

These are fundamental skills that most of us have not had the tools to assess or look at in detail before now. Such understanding of our most complex students could lead to changes in our teaching practice and open up wider opportunities for our students to interact and engage.

Assess

Many students with complex physical and learning needs also have additional visual difficulties that can remain undiagnosed or unconsidered during their years in education. Eye gaze technology can now give us the ability to objectively observe what a student can attend to and notice on screen.

What colour, size and type of image can they detect? Can they track moving objects? What are their eye movement patterns like? Do they scan the choices on screen? Can they compare and discriminate between images?

We are also interested in what images or parts of images students prefer to look at given choice, where they look in response to questions or prompts. Eye gaze technology can help us objectively record and review where a student looks to gain insight into their thinking process.

All the titles in the Inclusive Eye Gaze Software include powerful, but easy to use Analysis tools.

"The analysis tools are my personal favourite aspect of the software. They are easy to understand and are great for sharing progress with parents. I particularly liked the heat maps and would find these useful for assessment of eye tracking. It also helped me to see what the students found reinforcing which is very important to motivate communication."

Karen Carmody, Speech and Language Therapist

Include

The ultimate aim with any student using alternative access is to enable the use of the same resources and software as their peers. Switch software, though quite expensive, will remain limited, with the range and potential of mouse and touch accessible software far surpassing it. Eye gaze devices, such as myGaze with EyeMouse Play have been specially designed to easily emulate mouse access, thus widening the range of software titles available to the student using eye gaze technology.

Katie just has to look at the screen to play the next verse of the song.

Although, as with any access method, some practice is needed to use eye gaze with control and accuracy, there is often not the same time investment needed in learning pure access skills compared to other methods. Students can jump quickly to using the technology to achieve educational goals.

Whether the student is at the level of learning cause and effect or beginning to make choices, teachers and therapists now have the ability to let eye gaze students access their favourite classroom software and join in with lessons at an appropriate level.

"We use it with SLD and PMLD students and pupils with visual difficulties - to help develop vision and visual awareness. We used it across the school - pre-school, primary, secondary and also 16+."

Iveta Power, ICT Coordinator, Chailey Heritage

Engage

Some students with complex needs can appear to be uninterested in using technology or looking at screens. This could be for a variety of reasons; unrewarding, effortful or frustrating use of technology in the past, the content is not interesting or meaningful or perhaps they are at an early stage of interaction. The first place to start is fun!

Providing a stimulating environment may be one answer. Some schools are starting to include eye gaze technology in their sensory environments, controlling interactive screens and floors with just a look.

Remember most individuals need frequent practice and appropriate support to develop the skills needed to use formal communication or recording packages. Providing opportunities to play a wide range of different games and fun activities will help refine access skills and encourage students to want more. Get the student motivated then learning will follow.

Declan playing Eye Can Fly

"This is a chap who has sat in his chair since he was 19 with very little to occupy himself with. This game has changed not only his life in some small way but also his parents' lives because they are seeing him playing an activity that looks like a similar game that their grandkids play on the Wii. I personally find this title to be one of the most exciting to come out in years."

Sean Carroll - IT/AT Consultant. Feedback - Eye Can Fly

Empower

Moving on from early interaction skills, eye gaze devices have the capacity to give you full PC access to really empower your student. Launch and control standard applications such as Word, surf the Internet, communicate by email, Facebook or Skype, even control your environment, the possibilities are endless.

The myGaze Learning Wheel

The essential components of an eye gaze system. At the very centre is the tracker device (myGaze) which detects and follows your eye gaze.

Driving the tracker is the interface software (EyeMouse Play) which enables you to choose mouse functions and control settings for calibration and interaction.

Learning objectives make up the 'iris' and are categorised according to the skills you want to teach – this includes the software or content of your system.

These are bound by overall aims of what you hope you and your student will ultimately achieve with eye gaze; assessment, inclusion, engagement or empowerment.

Factors to consider when choosing an eye gaze system

- ### 1. Aims

Have a clear idea of your ultimate aim for the student using eye gaze. Is it to assess, include, engage or empower the student? Students may have more than one aim e.g. you may want to initially assess a student's visual skills and also include them in using simple cause and effect software or you might want to engage a user who has 'switched off' and empower them to control their own environment. Choose software that provides analysis tools to allow you to make baseline and ongoing assessments of the student's skills and progress so that aims and objectives can be referenced and adjusted accordingly.
- ### 2. Learning Stage

Identify your teaching objectives and the stage of learning your student is at. Like any other access method, users will need some time and practice in developing their accuracy and control of eye gaze. Some students will quickly work through all the stages of learning to become competent at eye gaze, whilst others will need longer and specific resources suited to their learning level. The table above gives you guidance in how specialist eye gaze software can be categorised into learning stages to meet different teaching objectives. Check out "How to use myGaze with HelpKidzLearn" at www.inclusive.co.uk/catalogue-downloads
- ### 3. Motivation

It is important when introducing any new technology to a student that their first experience is positive and fun. Choose activities that match their interests, give immediate feedback and automatic success. Try to avoid too many prompts or questions and allow the student plenty of time to explore and experience eye gaze by themselves. Try to provide a variety of activities and play them frequently for short periods. If you are not sure what motivates your student, make this one of your first aims and try a variety of images, sounds and video and observe what captivates them most using eye gaze analysis tools.
- ### 4. Visual Skills

Before trying eye gaze, find out if the student has any recognised visual difficulty that could affect seeing images on screen. Most eye gaze devices cope well with different types of glasses (though special coated or vari-focal lenses may be less successful). Check for bright lights reflecting off screens and lenses or thick frames that could interfere with eye gaze detection. There is usually an option to track just one eye to compensate for physical eye movement difficulties. Eye gaze analysis tools can help in assessing basic visual skills such as detection, tracking, scanning and discrimination.
- ### 5. Positioning

With all access devices positioning is critical in achieving success. Ensure your student is positioned correctly according to guidance from your eye gaze device so that the tracker can easily detect their eyes and the student is comfortable and relaxed. To achieve this, some students may need a flexible mounting system to position the screen at the right angle and height. For others you may need to consider a portable system or a classroom resource that can be altered for a range of students. Try to consider who you are going to use it with, where will it be used and on what device at the onset.
- ### 6. Support and Training

Setting up, using and adjusting eye gaze devices has often needed the support and guidance of experts in the field. At Inclusive Technology we believe that this process should be made as simple as possible so that more professionals and students can benefit from this amazing technology. We have worked hard to design and deliver easy to use, intuitive interfaces and software that require little or no training to use. However, it is still going to need the expertise and support of the team around the student to interpret results and provide the right resources and time allocation to ensure success.

The Magic Cloud lets learners link their physical and digital worlds. It is not only powerful for exploring computing, but offers almost limitless possibilities for creativity. Use the Magic Cloud to link objects to a sound file, picture or video on your computer. The Magic Cloud is a soft cushion that connects to a the computer via a USB port. It is programmed to recognise when small plastic tags are placed on it. Users can link these tags to images, video or audio using the included software when they are placed on the cloud. Attaching these tags to objects and materials allows children to make novel connections between the physical and the digital.

Easy to Use

Use the Magic Cloud to link objects to a sound file, picture or video on your computer. The software included allows you to programme one of the supplied tags to play a media file by simply placing it on the Magic Cloud. (Tags can be re-programmed and used again). The tag can then easily be fixed to any object, photograph or print out of a symbol and then linked to a media file by placing it on the Magic Cloud.

How It Works

1. Place tag on Magic Cloud
2. Link tag to media file
3. Stick tag to object
4. Place tagged object onto Magic Cloud

Use the Magic Cloud with an interactive board or large screen to provide simple direct interaction without a keyboard or mouse. Use symbols or pictures linked to a sound recording, digital photograph or video file to help a child understand the meaning of the symbol or to use the tags to make simple choices. Laptop not included.

The Magic Cloud addresses the KS1 Computing curriculum objectives and supports creative cross-curricular ICT.

Magic Cloud is available in white, grey or blue with either 2 or 30 tags and software. Please specify colour and number of tags when ordering.

A motivating computer program that uses 50 games to teach and reinforce numeracy and improve understanding and use of numbers. The carefully designed games provide many ways in which to practise the same information. It is most often used by students aged between 6 and 15. Most games are appropriate for any age although a few of the games are more suitable for younger children. Older students, with reasonable number skills, can use it to improve their mental maths - sometimes before exams. It addresses many of the difficulties which lead students to dislike maths. These include poor short term memory, limited attention span and poor sequencing skills. To help those with dyslexia and dyscalculia, many of the games give a visual idea of what is happening when you add, subtract, multiply or divide. Fractions and decimals are also shown visually. Variable speeds and other options meet all grades of skill.

Stages of Switch Use

Switch users need a wide range of learning materials to help develop their skills. These programs can also be used with a plasma screen or whiteboard, touch monitor or mouse.

Cause and Effect...

First, the learner needs to be aware of the relationship between their switch press and the resulting reward. Some grasp this immediately; others need lots of practice with a variety of activities.

Switch Timing...

Learning to press the switch at the right time is a very big step in switch operation. It requires the motor and cognitive skills to operate the switch and an understanding of the task.

Choosing...

The next stage of switch control is selecting required items. This involves a scanning process controlled by one or two switches. It enables access to a wider range of curriculum material.

Switch Skills 1

This collection of easy switch timing activities is fun for all ages. The exciting themes provide all the motivation needed to help students who understand cause and effect to develop more disciplined switch use. It also encourages speaking and listening and helps develop concentration skills. The bright, clear graphics are suitable for those with visual impairment and there is lots of sound and music too. Activities include racing cars, gorilla and fruit, soccer shoot, traffic lights, catch the crocodiles and sunflower. Press when you see a car to make it race, or when the bee reaches the middle of the flower. The Monster House activity provides an introduction to switch scanning. Feedback and teacher options are provided.

Switch Skills 2

Twenty activities at an elementary level. Press the switch or the touch screen when a big, bright object appears and see an animated reward. Exciting music promotes interest. Higher level activities require more visual discrimination, although most can still be played successfully by those with severe visual impairment.

Configurable options allow you to meet individual needs or develop learners' skills in small steps. Four activities provide opportunities for creative and experimental play by early switch users, e.g. the spray can zigzags over a wall and sprays paint when you press the switch. Topics range widely and should appeal to a wide range of ages. Try out Gopher in a Drainpipe and Mystery Egg at www.helpkidzlearn.com

Switch Skills 3

Fifteen activities at a higher level than Switch Skills 2, split into four sections. The first section features six activities with a large target, for example Splat the Clowns - watch a clown move across the screen and throw a custard pie at him when he reaches the middle. Other games of a similar nature have themes appropriate for older learners. The next section has four activities which are more demanding, with smaller targets in different places on the screen. For example, lighting fireworks. A set of music activities allow learners to experiment with sound whilst learning to choose using a switch. There are three exciting video games, such as Jungle Adventure.

Switch Skills - Scanning

Switch Skills - Scanning is a set of twenty two simple and motivating switch activities. It is designed for students who are learning how to use switches to make choices, either within software or scanning communication devices. The activities can be used with one or two switches. The activities are split into five sections with increasing levels of skill and complexity in very small steps. These begin with free choice activities that allow experimental play. More demanding tasks with specific targets are then introduced. The CD features a wide range of themes including music groups, rockets, a funfair, trains, farm and treasure island, and is part of our popular Switch Skills Series.

Switch Skills for Two Set 1

This CD contains sixteen activities in carefully graded sections. It provides an accessible environment to encourage the learner to move beyond the stage of cause and effect. Thinking, experimenting, observing and interacting are encouraged by providing simple activities that delight and engage. For example, in the Two Objects section, choose to press the left switch (or spacebar) to make the ballerina dance beautifully, or the right switch to let the monster do his crazy dance. Or in Interacting Objects, choose to control a frying pan to try to hit the gopher. There are spacemen to jump into rockets and blast off, basketball players to help shoot baskets, a crocodile to be woken up and fed, musicians to perform and much more.

Switch Skills for Two Set 2

Eleven more activities for experimenting and progressing towards effective scanning skills. Also suitable for two learners as a basis for cooperative play. Build Up promotes the use of one switch to add items to the screen, with the second switch used to start the action or watch the animated reward. Build a tin can tower and knock it down, make a rocket and launch it, blow up a balloon until it pops, or sit the children on the roller coaster and start the action. Move and Get activities are designed to move learners towards the skills required to use, for example, a scanning communicator. Activities include loading crates onto trucks, feeding the croc, dance partners and passing the ball along a line of basketball players to shoot.

Slideshow Maker

Makes it easy for the busy SEN or Early Years practitioner to make simple slideshows with accompanying music for early switch users. The slideshows can also be used with a touch screen, plasma or mouse. Simply choose a set of pictures, add a music track and you're away. Slideshows can be started and stopped using one or two switches. This is useful for teaching two switch control or taking turns, and is invaluable for learners with PMLD or those learning to make choices using a switch or by pointing. The slideshow can also be given a timer so it automatically stops after a certain time. For early choice making, a picture board can be set up with between two and nine pictures to choose from by pointing, switch scanning or using the mouse. Each picture starts a different slideshow, then the picture board is shown again, this is good for turn taking with a group. More able learners who can use a mouse or touch screen will enjoy making their own slideshows with the editor, which is free of clutter and the buttons are large and have symbols. You can get pictures from a camera, the Internet, or webcam, then change their order in the slideshow using simple drag and drop. Full export features allow you to share slideshows.

iPads and Tablets for Special Needs

Tablet technology has changed the way many of us use technology daily for work and leisure. The iPad and other tablets have overtaken the computer as the way to access the Internet or play music and video and we use tablets for everything from shopping to reading a book.

Many special schools and services are investing in iPads and tablet technology but what do they offer to our students with special needs over the standard desktop computer? This day will look at using tablet technology with students with special needs in a realistic way, looking at both the advantages and disadvantages.

- What is a tablet?
- The advantages and disadvantages of using a tablet.
- Choosing a tablet – iPad, Android or Windows?
- What is an App and where do you get them?
- Protecting your tablet.
- Positioning and mounting your tablet.
- Tablets and Augmentative and Alternative Communication (AAC).
- Adapting your tablet: Access options in tablet operating systems.
- Switches and tablets.

Eye Gaze in the Classroom

Eye gaze technology offers a quick, easy and less tiring way of accessing the computer than traditional methods, such as switches and scanning.

The new range of low cost eye gaze trackers is leading special schools and services to begin using eye gaze as part of their inclusive accessible classrooms and access resource kits alongside more traditional assistive technology such as switches and joysticks.

It offers us an opportunity to obtain objective and functional feedback and analysis of our student's visual skills and preferences. This day will provide you with a structured method of using eye gaze with your most profoundly disabled students in a successful way.

- How does eye gaze technology work?
- Choosing an eye gaze system to meet your aims.
- The Learning Stages of Eye Gaze – Assess, Include, Engage and Empower.
- Assess: Using eye gaze for assessment of visual skills and individual preferences and comprehension.
- Include: From Cause and Effect through to Choice Making and access to the curriculum.
- Include: Using eye gaze with other software.
- Engage: finding motivating activities from game playing to music creation.
- Empower: Providing access to the Windows environment.
- Empower: Using eye gaze to control your environment, from toys to the automated home.
