

David Beckham participated with UNICEF as a member of UNICEF's football team, Manchester United, hosting Gala dinners and holding campaigns such as the UNICEF Gala Dinner that alone raised over £215,000. Having been a powerful advocate and supporter of the organization, he was promoted to the status of a Goodwill Ambassador.

Recently, David Beckham has formed his own campaign within UNICEF, called "7: The David Beckham UNICEF Fund" which is a platform that he heads to aid children by raising funds to provide education and protection for children. His commitment to UNICEF after his retirement from football is remarkably genuine and profound and shows his great concern for the health and well-being of youths.
